

DREAM ANIME CHRONICLES

THE GOD WHO
FORGOT TOMORROW

Amnie Zia
woke with the shape
of a god and almost
none of the memories.

Their eyes still
held stars,
but their past answered
in broken light.

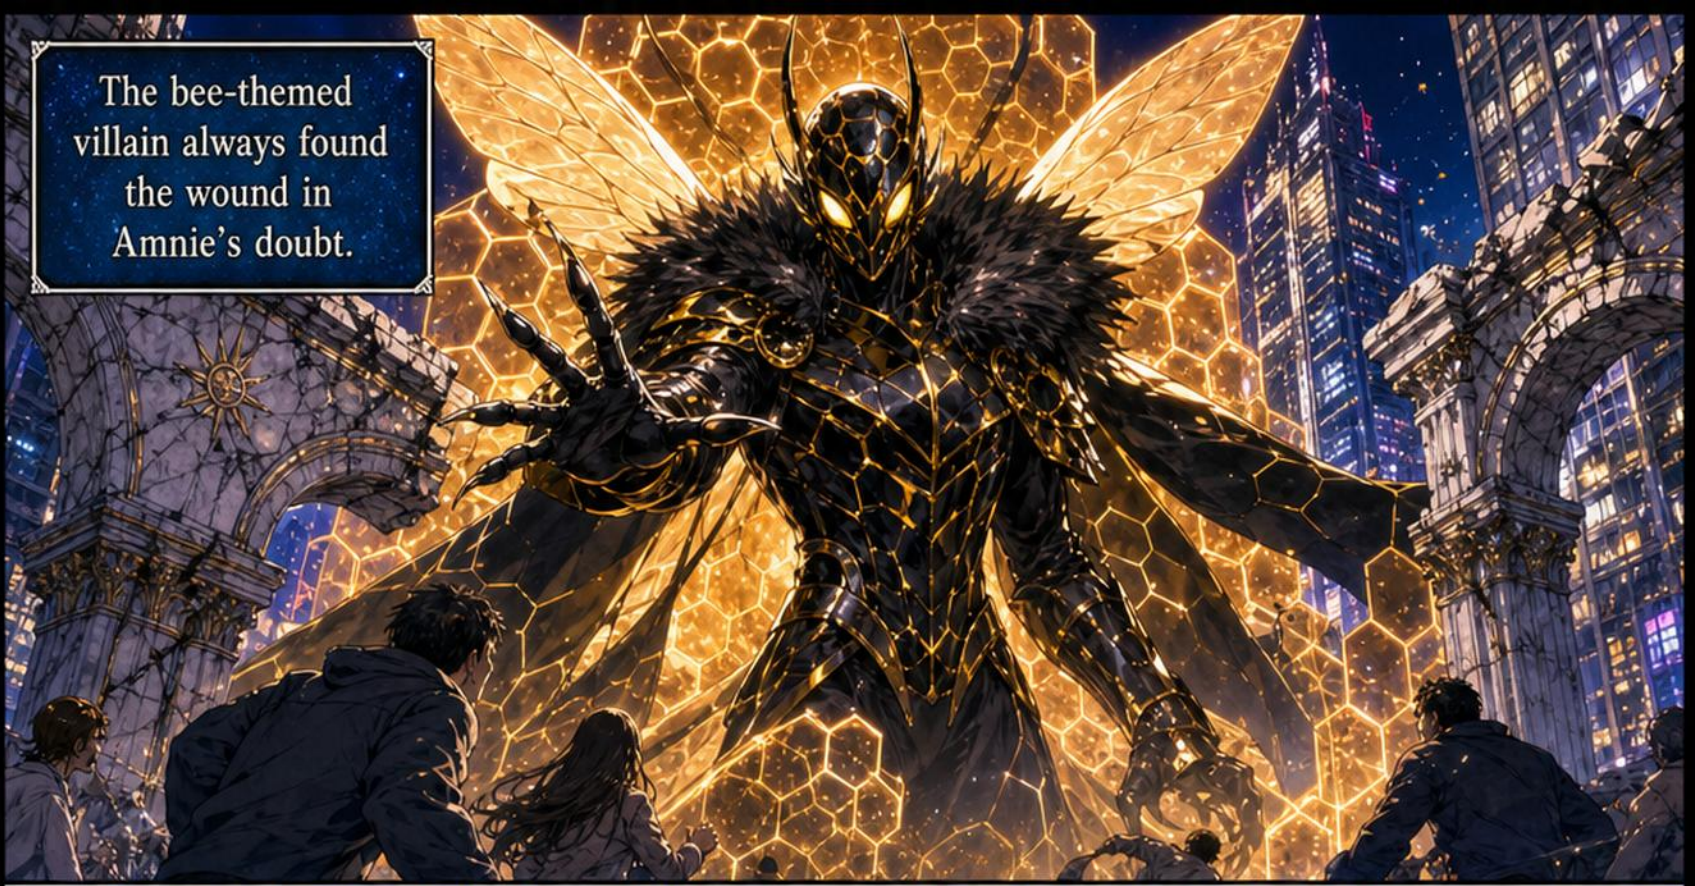

Reality should
have obeyed them.

So far, it mostly
sent dinosaurs.

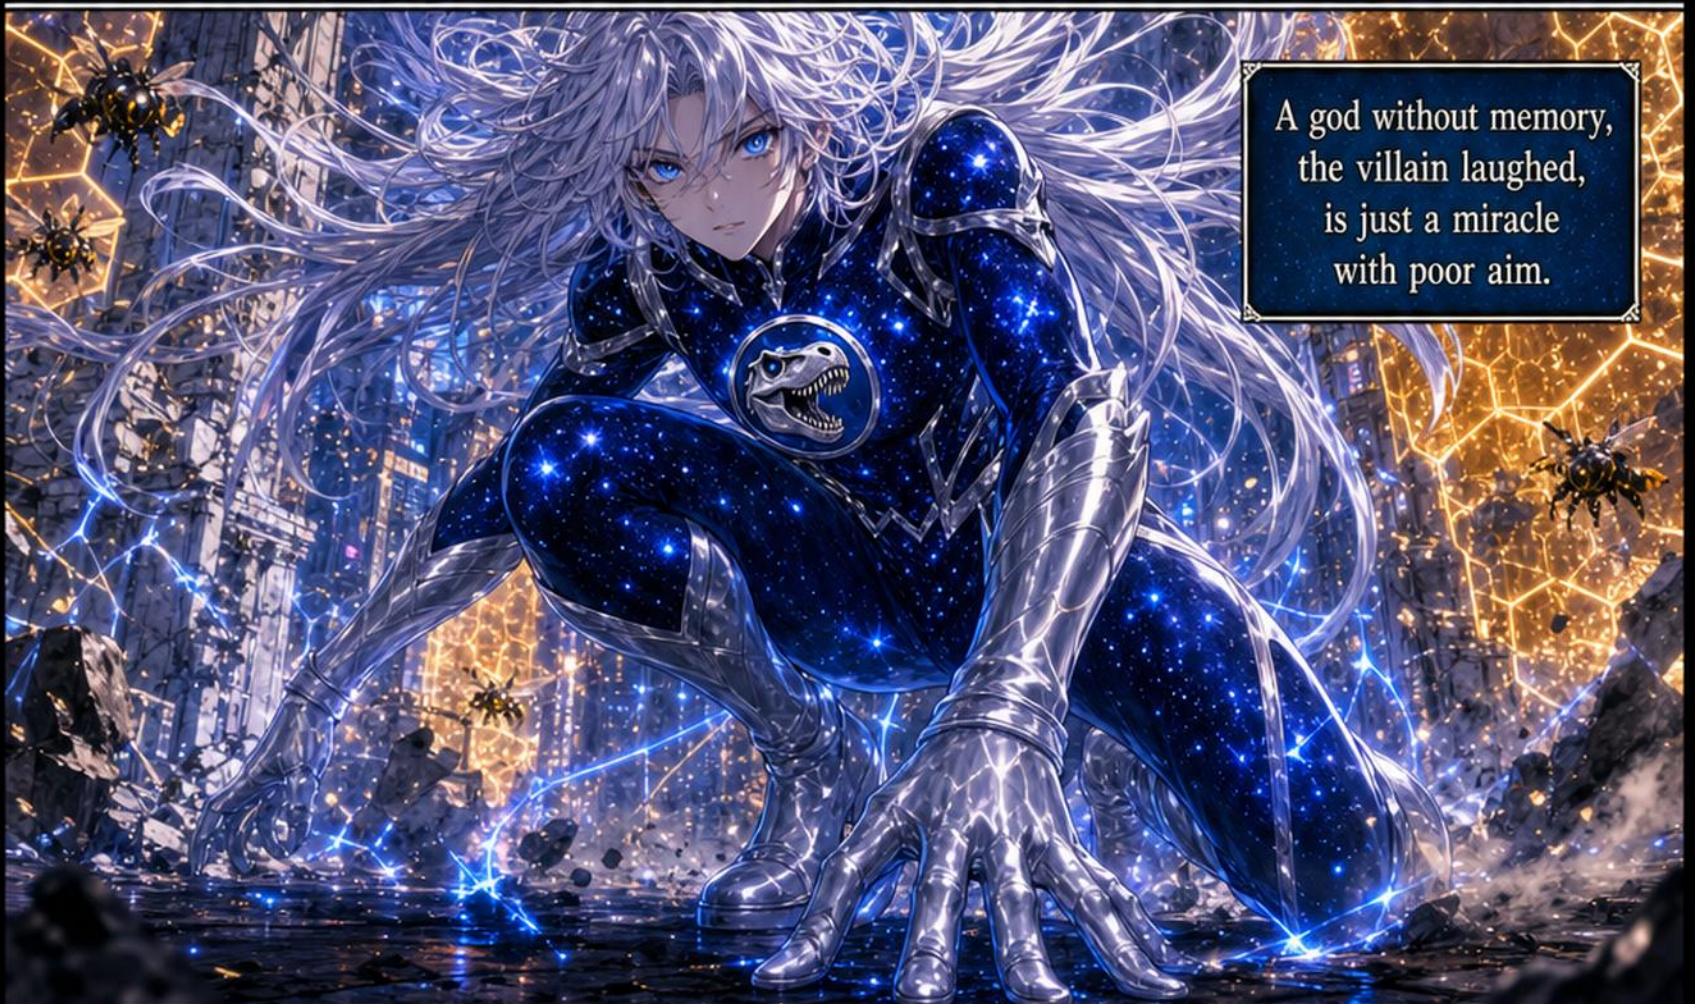

The bee-themed
villain always found
the wound in Amnie's doubt.

Mnemosyne Junction
became a hive of
amber walls and
panicked streets.

A god without memory,
the villain laughed,
is just a miracle
with poor aim.

Amnie
answered mockery
with size.

A thunder-lizard
tore through
the hive wall.

The villain bent
the swarm around
every heroic roar.

The street was safer
before Amnie tried
to prove what
they were.

Amnie saved
lives.

Then the saved
asked why a god
never fixed the rest.

Broken homes.
Empty clinics.
Streets that flooded
every season.

Every ordinary need
became another name
Amnie could not
remember.

Then the hive struck
something older
than pain.

A door opened in Amnie's missing past.

They saw a throne
among forgotten
gods.

They saw power
enough to rewrite
the whole disaster.

And below it,
one child screamed.

Amnie let
the throne fade.

A perfect god
might have saved
everything.

Amnie was
not perfect.

Amnie was
here.

The dinosaurs
did not need to
prove a god.

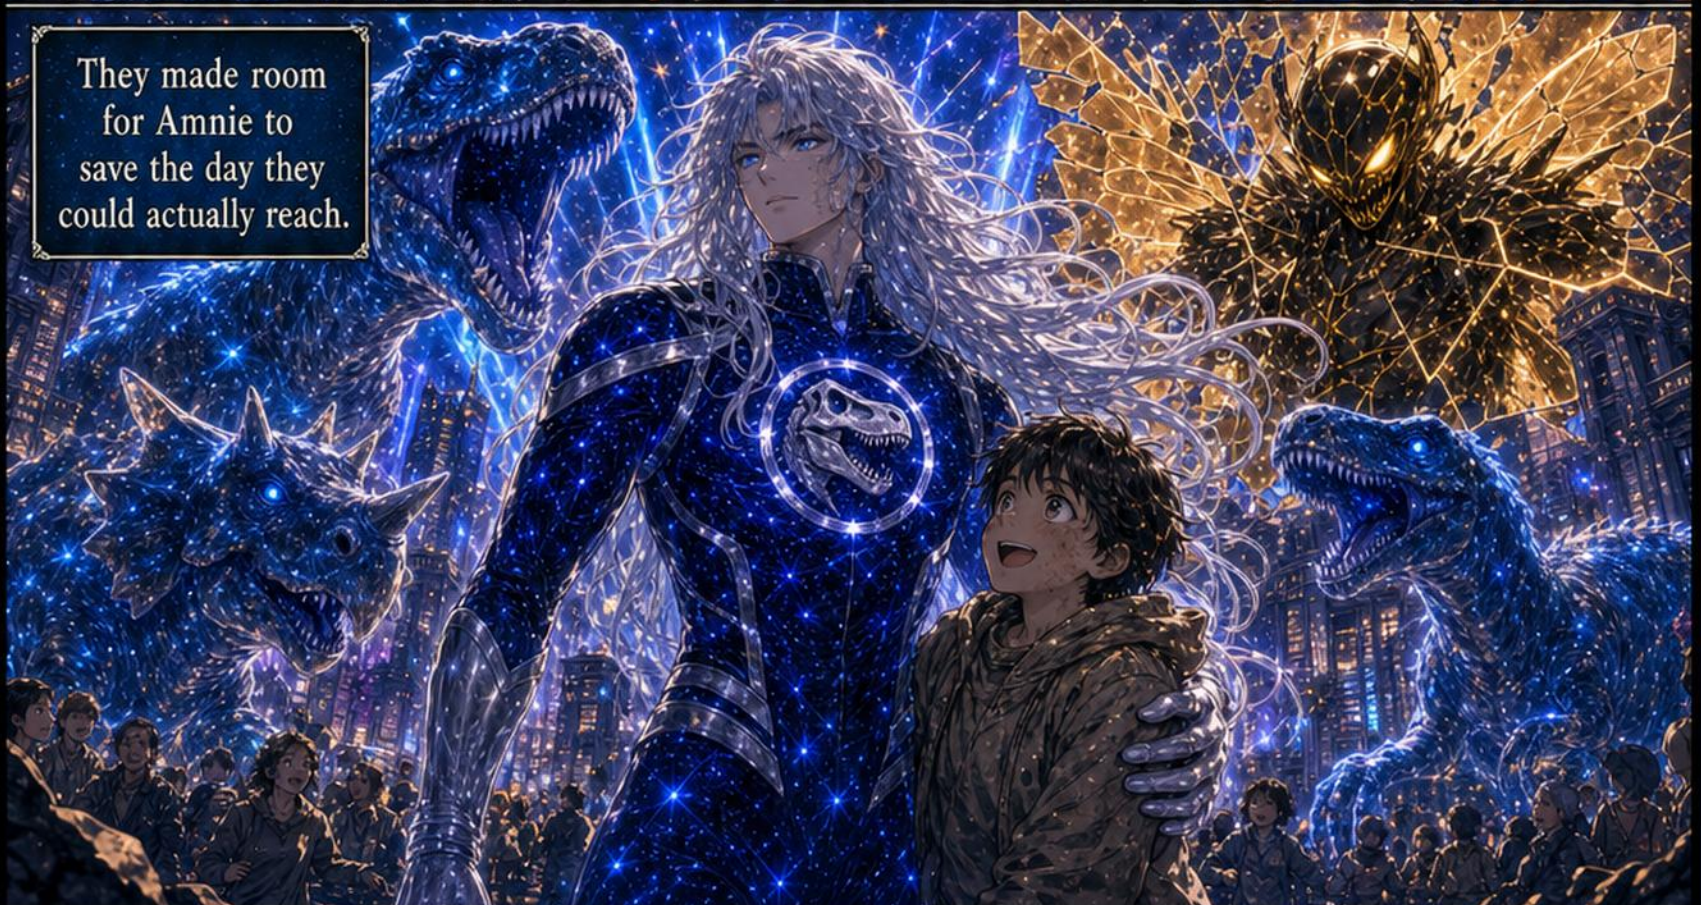

They lifted
what was falling.

They carried
who could
not run.

They made room
for Amnie to save the day they
could actually reach.

Amnie Zia is an amnesiac god with long silver hair, iridescent pale skin, cosmic-blue starry eyes, and a blue star-speckled unitard marked by a silver T-Rex. Their full reality-shaping power is hidden behind missing memories, leaving dinosaur command as the ability they can trust. A bee-themed villain mocks their limits, and the people they save ask why a god cannot fix every ordinary pain. Amnie's first victory is choosing one life first. Protect now. Remember later.
