

Dream Anime CHRONICLES

THE
TORNADO
THAT ASKED WHY

Before the armor, Cheun Yi chased
every rumor past the edge of the map.

He talked to strangers
like every answer was hiding in a new friend.

Then the wind
began circling
only him.

A gray book with a dead face opened
on the road and called his name without
using a mouth.

The book did
not explain destiny.

It fastened
destiny to his shoulders.

From the stone came
a spirit like a bat
taught to spin forever.

Cheun spun
because the spirit spun.

His wrist
became a funnel.

His shoulder
became a
storm.

The faster he turned, the less
he could hear
himself think.

Power answered
him before
wisdom did.

Cheun asked
why he had been chosen.

The book showed
him other shoulders
under other skies.

He asked what would happen when they gathered.

The book answered
by letting its margins
crawl into monsters.

The book pointed
him toward another
chosen soul.

Cheun arrived with too many words and
too much wind.

The recruit saw
a stranger, a monster-book, and a storm wearing
a smile.

Cheun finally understood that destiny could
sound like a threat.

Cheun stopped
asking the book
for the ending.

He asked the wind
for one safe step.

A tornado did not have to destroy.

In Cheun Yi's hands,
it could carry.

The recruit did not need every answer
before taking Cheun's hand.

Neither
did Cheun.

The book kept its
final purpose locked
behind its crooked
smile.

Cheun Yi walked on anyway, because the
next shoulder bearer
might already be
calling for wind.

Cheun Yi is
a charismatic
shoulder bearer
chosen by a
ghoulish gray book.

His stone shoulder
pads and wrist guards
connect him to a
bat-and-spinning-top
spirit from another
realm.

By spinning his body
or even one arm, Cheun
can create purple
tornadoes for combat,
rescue, travel, and
protection.

He wants to know why
the book is gathering shoulder bearers, but his first lesson is not an answer. It is a choice: protect the people the mission
sends him to find, even while the final purpose stays hidden.
