

Superhero MANDROID

The Voice That Broke The Hall
ISSUE #3

The opera house was full before the portal opened.

The singer's voice had already filled the hall.

Then something small and hungry fell from another world.

The parasite closed over her head like a helmet.

Her song became a command.

The crowd ran from the stage.

Mandroid did not use the lobby.

A rocket punch opened the back wall.

He charged from behind before the parasite could turn the hall into a grave.

The possessed singer aimed her voice downward.

Sound became thrust.

The blast lifted her like a stage wire
made of thunder.

She flipped above
the seats.

Mandroid turned too late.

The parasite smiled with someone else's face.

The next note
hit him square.

The blast threw Mandroid into the seats.

Velvet, brass, and concrete folded around him.

The inventor's holo message
cut through the ringing.

The parasite was amplifying a trained voice into supernatural force.

On stage,
the stolen voice laughed.

Mandroid stood up anyway.

The next scream pinned him down.

The holo shield caught the third blast.

He walked into the note one step at a time.

It felt like marching through hurricane wind.

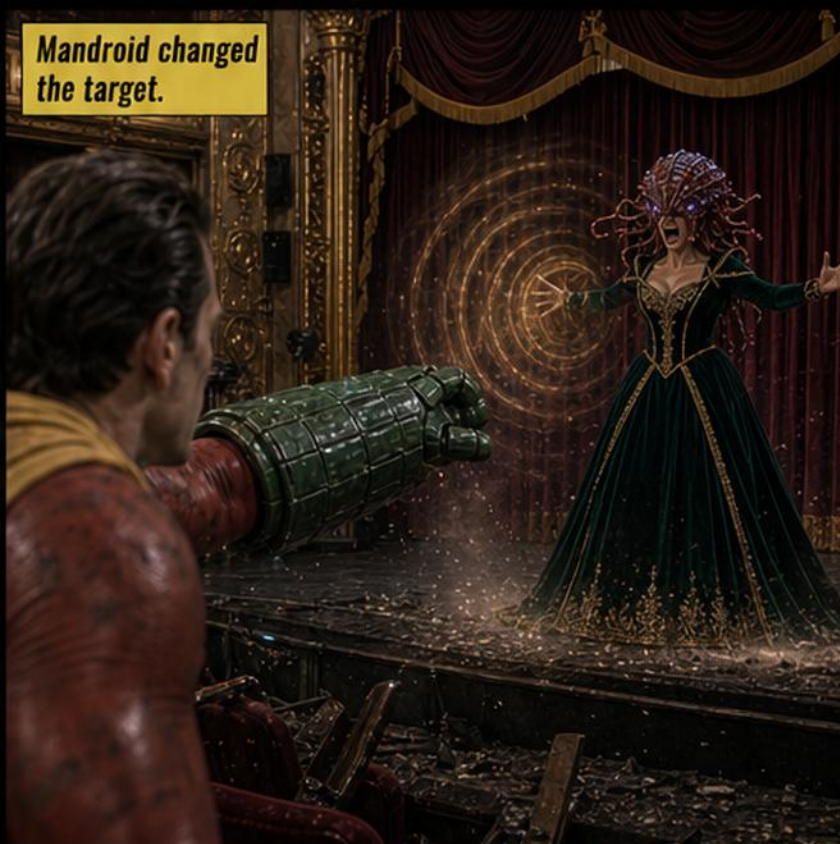

The shield charge bled away before he reached her.

Close range had failed.

Mandroid changed the target.

The rocket fist launched through the scream.

Boosters tore a tunnel
in the sound.

The punch struck the parasite, not the singer.

The demon came loose.

The singer's own voice returned to her.

The parasite died on the stage.

The crowd survived because Mandroid aimed carefully.

He had fought robots, scorpions, demons, and living sludge.

Mind control was something new to watch for.

